

MASTER'S PROGRAM 2007-2008 ACADEMIC YEAR

The Master of Science Program at the College for Financial Planning consists of the following three majors:

MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREE IN PERSONAL FINANCIAL PLANNING: This two-for-one field of study prepares you for the CFP® Certification Examination (in seven courses), then positions you for a master's degree (after six additional courses). Your studies will emphasize the traditional areas of financial planning and then expand into specialized instruction.

MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREE IN FINANCIAL ANALYSIS: Your studies in this major incorporate the CFA Institute's Body of Knowledge, preparing you for the CFA Level I, II, and III exams. You'll leave your studies with an in-depth investment knowledge gained via real-world situations and case scenarios.

MASTER OF SCIENCE DEGREE IN FINANCE: This degree will propel you above others in the business world because you'll have the technical competence to make financial decisions that can generate true value for today's business stakeholders. You'll develop a grounded foundation for business, economics, and quantitative skills.

In addition to our three majors, the College for Financial Planning offers certifications made up of individual Master of Science courses specific to each discipline. Certifications are available in Personal Financial Planning, Retirement Planning, Estate Planning, as well as Financial Analysis Levels I and II.
